

Pelusa Has Died

Magdalena Rosas
Alejandra Saavedra

AGE: 8+

Ñire Negro, 2019

ISBN: 978-95-686-476-2-9 · 25x25cm ·
32pp · Hardcover · Spanish · All territories

A book about the process of grieving and coming to grips with the loss in a calm and loving manner

Pelusa, the kitten, has died. This causes a great pain in her little human friend who, tries to understand the meaning of that loss, where her pet might have gone and why she still feels her close.

Thus, she decides to follow her mother's advice and starts to carefully look around for the traces Pelusa has left within the house, but most importantly, those remaining in her own memory.

A story that explores the feelings and thoughts of a girl who has lost her pet and how she faces loss, showing us a way to deal with it by treasuring in our hearts and memories those who have left.

Magdalena Rosas is a music teacher, cellist and writer with more than twenty-five years of experience related to education and cultural management in Aysén, Patagonia.

Alejandra Saavedra is a Mexican illustrator, designer and visual communicator. She has worked in several editorial projects about culture and social networks.

